"Sustainable Future Growth of Air Cargo"

The Aviation Industry is currently in a transformational stage, with having had to rethink their future strategies and operations in a way that shapes a greener & sustainable. Even though passenger traffic has been badly hit due to the pandemic's detrimental impact, the silver lining during these challenging times has been the resilience of the Air cargo sector worldwide, which has also been a substantial revenue generator source for Airlines.

In today's India, rapid enhancement of airport cargo infrastructure, digital infrastructure for cargo handling, customs digital transformation and the development of collaborative partnership models wherein all stakeholders manage cargo multilaterally is also seen due to the pandemic. Cargo demand during these times also forced Indian airports to accelerate or augment their cargo capabilities, develop or expand exclusive terminals for handling temperature-sensitive pharmaceuticals or express e-commerce cargo.

This vital sector is currently set for a huge transformation and the current need is to adopt sustainable strategies for its future growth. The future of the Air Cargo Ecosystem will be driven by digitization and the rapid implementation & utilization of emergent technologies, leading to higher efficiency, reduced dwell times, end-to-end paperless operations, lower total costs and seamless vertical integration of the entire supply chain, which would unlock enormous stakeholder potential and streamline communication between parties at every link in the cargo supply chain.

India with its unique geographical advantages also has the potential to become a massive cargo hub for the entire region and the airports along with the state governments can play a major role in developing freighter hubs, along with giving incentives to freighter carriers to transform India into the future logistical nerve center.

The PM Gati Shakti, National Master Plan for Multi-modal Connectivity, which is focussing on integrated planning and coordinated implementation of infrastructure connectivity projects has also received a thrust in the current budget, with a focus on development of 100 Gati Shakti cargo stations which will also aid the future growth of the Logistic ecosystem.

Adoption of new digital technologies, increased stakeholder collaboration, innovation, agility, real-time collaboration, enabling seamless air cargo partner integration and connectivity for efficient and transparent end-to-end operations, along with focus on infrastructure investments are some major prerequisites for the Industry's sustainable future growth of the air cargo & logistics ecosystem. All players in the air cargo industry need to continually innovate, and raise the bar for customer experience and operational excellence.

Hence, against this background , PHDCCI Air Cargo Webinar Series -2022 -themed "Sustainable Future Growth of Air Cargo", invites all stakeholders of the Air Transport, Air Cargo, Logistics industry & Allied Industry stakeholders to come together and offer sustainable suggestions for the Air Cargo Industry's future transformation & growth.
