NORTH EAST INDIA AT A GLANCE

Assam, Arunachal Pradesh, Manipur, Meghalaya, Mizoram, Nagaland, Tripura and Sikkim are eight states located in the North East of the country and command special importance in India, not only because of their location but also their cultural and historical uniqueness. The landscape, the range of communities and geographical and ecological diversity make these states quite different from other parts of the country. They are known as eight siblings and referred to as 'seven sisters and one brother'. These States cover an area of 2,63,179 sq. km, approximately eight per cent of the country's total geographical area and house around 3.76 per cent of the total population of the Country. The Region shares an International border of 5,182 kilometres (3,220 miles) (about 99 percent of its total geographical boundary) with several neighbouring Countries – 1,395 kilometres (867 miles) Tibet in the north, 1,640 kilometres (1,020 miles) with Myanmar-Barak river systems and valley plains. The hills and basins are a mixture of mountain ranges, plateaus, low hills and valleys. The eight States that comprise the Region reflect ecological and cultural contrasts between the hills and the plains; there are also significant elements of continuity. Available medieval and modern records indicate interdependence and interaction between the hills and plains. The North East is one of the most bio diverse Regions in the world. The forest cover varies but average 65 per cent is Government owned. Village communities, individuals and chiefs own the rest. The area can be divided into three geographical divisions-the Shillong Plateau, the North Eastern hill Basin and the Brahmaputra Valley.

The North East is connected to the Indian Mainland by a narrow land corridor, sometimes referred to as the Siliguri Neck or "Chicken's Neck". Surrounded by hills and beautiful rivers, these States fall in the category of Eastern Himalayan ranges and Patkai-Naga hills along with Brahmaputra-Barak river systems and valley plains. The hills and basins are a mixture of mountain ranges, plateaus, low hills and valleys. The eight States that comprise the Region reflect ecological and cultural contrasts between the hills and the plains; there are also significant elements of continuity. The area can be divided into three geographical divisions-the Shillong Plateau, the North Eastern hill Basin and the Brahmaputra Valley.

Rich in natural resources and flora and fauna, the Region is a gateway to East and South-East Asia. States like Arunachal Pradesh, Meghalaya, Mizoram and Nagaland are predominantly inhabited by tribals with a certain degree of diversity among the tribes. States like Assam, Manipur, Tripura and Sikkim are inhabited by people of various religious denominations like, Hindus, Christians and Muslims and a combination of local tribes and communities.

Arunachal Pradesh is the Largest State in the Region in regards to geographical area, while Assam is the Largest State in the Region in terms of Economy. Guwahati, the Capital city of Assam, is the largest City of the North East India and is also called 'The Gateway to the North East' and 'The Gateway to ASEAN Counties'.

While the Region has a lower level of industrial and economic development compared to the Indian Mainland, it has abundant forest and natural resources. Petroleum and tea are two significant resources harnessed in the Region. At the same time, Agriculture & Horticulture, Handloom & Handicraft and Tourism continues to be the main economic activities of Region.
