About Conference

Food is a fundamental human right and essential for building a sustainable future. Recognizing this right means creating a food system that meets today's needs while protecting our planet and health for the future. The World Food Day 2024 supports diverse, nutritious, affordable, safe and sustainable food for all. "Right to Foods for a better life and a better future: Leave no one behind". This aims to highlight the immediate and long-term benefits of prioritising access to safe and nutritious food for all. The transition towards sustainability necessitates embracing nature-positive production approaches, reducing food loss and waste, and adopting healthy diets. Effective governance and policy frameworks are foundational for achieving sustainable food system transformations. This encompasses adopting supportive policies, enhancing participatory processes, and ensuring accountability. Embracing these changes would promote the health of our planet and populations, paving the way for a sustainable future.
